Scrofula

Is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of improper vacci-nation, mercurial poison, uncleanliness, and various other causes. Chronic Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, Cancerous Humors, and, in some cases, Emaciation and Consumption, result from a scrofulous condi-tion of the blood. This disease can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The reformers in Washington who for the past year or more have been sending out word about the number of hours they work and how hard it is to run this great government, even with the increased expenditures, should take heart. 1888 is rapidly approaching and then the people will give them a very long vacation.

The Mississippi Bourbons carried out their programme. The fifteen thousand Republican majority in Judge Simrall's district was entirely ignored and a solid Democratic delegation will represent Mis-

The President's indifference to Buffalo dates from election day, 1884, when Erie Coun y, notwithstanding the enormous campaign fund raised by his personal giving our patrons friends, went against him by 1,400 votes. Of this purchase. He has disliked his old home from that day. He has separated himself from his day. He has separated himself from his former friends and neighbors. He prefers nominal price of the trouble to go back on election day and vote. Yet Buffalo does not appear to be thankless and unconcerned when its distinguished citizens are nominated for high office. Judge Daniels, for example, has received over 5,000 majority in Erie County.

The Philadelphia Times, a Democratic paper, in speaking of the great Republican demonstration in Camden. New Jarsay stration in Camden, New Jersey, says; "The drawing qualities of James G. B aine were again demonstrated last evening when he closed the canvass for the Republicans in Camden. When the doors of the West street side of the building were thrown open, at 7 o'clock, the crow I which had been waiting and struggling for positions outside for hours, sweps in in a wave which was broken only wher it reached the line of policemen which stood as a bulwark to protect the platform and reserved seats on each side. In a twinkling 300 chairs, placed in rows in the front of the hall, were filled, and the centre and side sisies were packed with people." Of Mr. Blaine's reception the Times says: "His appearance was the signal for a tremendous outburst of cheers and huzzas, which was simultaneous with the rising of the great throng to its feet and the swinging of a myriad of hats in the air. The music of the band was drowned and for a while it seemed as though there was no end to the enthusiastic and vociferous ovation." Of Mr. Boutelle's speech at the opening of the meeting, the Times says : "Mr. Boutelle, who is a vigorous and entertaining speaker, held the close attention of the vast audience as to the causes that lead to his defeat has been telegraphed from his home in Illinois. Mr. Morrison, of course, very naturally dislikes to let himself down with a dull thud, so he indulges in the usual Democratic talk about hiring and bribing voters to go against him, but when he gets down to real business the cause for his defeat is found in the fact that the laboring men, in his district are doing their own thinking. BALTIMORE, Wm. B. Hazelton, once a well known journalist, died to-day of softening of the brain, aged 33. He was at one time managing editor of the Battimore American and had been connected with other papers, but he was widely known from his connection with the Times' daily paper which he started in a most expensive manner with little or no means. It lived two weeks but was conceeded to be the most ably edited paper ever issued in this city. He, with the late of Edward Spencer, wrote and produced a leonic opera some years ago, "The Electric Light.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Nov. 5. A warrant was issued this afternoon against John Shea charging him with the murder of James Lawler, of Greenfield, a citizen about 60 years old. Last Monday evening a quarrel occurred and blows were exchanged from the effect of which Lawler died this afternoon, having continued unconscious up to that time. At first a warrant was issued against Shea for assault and later it was changed to murder. Yes-Partyand later it was changed to murder. Yesterday Shea left town saying be would return by the "owl train," but he is still absent and a report is current that he has fled. Meanwhile the officers are searching for him. The particulars of the case so far as learned are these:

During his brief stay here Shea has been a quiet, unassuming man here Shea has been a quiet, unassuming man in every way peaceable in disposition, and not long since moved his family here from Springfield and drove the butcher's cart for Doyle's market. It seems that Lawler was indignant at Doyle on account of a ulsunderstanding over the dissolution of co-partnership between Doyle and one of Lawler's sons and it is alleged he has on several occasions made threats. Doyle wanted his horse, which had been kept at Lawler's barn and asked one of Lawler's sons to drive it up, but he refused, ler's sons to drive it up, but he refused, saying "the old man" threatened to kill him if he had anything to do about the horse.

Shea said he would get it and went into the stable. While there Lawler entered and commenced talking aga nst Doyle. Shea said he did not care to hear his complaints, he was simply an employe and advised him to go to Doyle with his tirade. At this it is claimed Lawler left the stable and soon after returned with a shovel, with which he struck Shea over the head. Shea got the shovel away and with it Shea got the shovel away and with it struck Lawler several times over the head. the blows being heard distinctly by the neighbors. Lawler has been unable to

LABOR MATTERS.

At the Chicago Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5. Contrary to first reports a large majority of the beef men at Ai mour's declined to leave work at the order promulgated as coming from M. J. Butler, their master workman in the Knights of Labor. Just 400 men out of the 1,500 employed in Armour's house obeyed the instructions to quit, but fully 250 of the 400 quickly returned to work. No clear explanation of how, the order came to be circulated was obtainable this evening. Butler was unwilling to talk upon the subject Turther than to state that he was not at the orecting last night when the order was made, and he must disclaim all knowledge of it. Notwithstanding Butler's declaration, an employe who refused to strike to-day, said the order was not ently in the Handwriting of the master workman but also bore his signature.

"What's the meaning of it all, that's what I want to know?" demanded the outwhat I want to know?" demanded the outraged Jane.

"Old Miss Brown's coming; he's going a courting of her," suiggered the cook—a conviction in which she was much confirmed when just as the guests were expected, Jade informed her that the master had appeared in a new dress suit, with a flower in his button-hole, and a pair of "panksnay" on his nose.

which Wiggins noted with approval as sure to impress the unsophisticated Sybil. The solicitor contrived very ensually to drop the fact he expected some people of the name of Eason, and had the satisfaction of seeing a look of keen interest dart into Lorrain's expressive face.

"Living in Morley Square?" the young man asked quickly; but 'before any answer could be given the door opened and the Easons were announced.

Sybil's allowance was whnt giris call "skimpy," but she had a knack of putting on her clothes so that the poorest of them looked well on her; and as she stepped in now, with soft folds of Indian muslin falling about her lissome figure, a pretty flush on her checks, and a smile on her lips for her friend; Mr. Wiggins, she made a charming picture, and one that effected an abiding lodgment for itself in Lorrain's mind.

As for her, she was a good deal conticed.

an anothing lodgment for itself in Lorrain's mind.

As for her, she was a good deal excited at being introduced to any one of the name of Lorrain. At first she tried to be gool and reserved, but soon she unbent, reflecting that she might have caught the name wrong, or he might belong to quite another family of Lorrains. In the course of dinner, however, he asked her whether she lived in Morley Square, and she flashed the question-back at him. Did he live in Queen's Gate?—upon which a momentary sligner ensued, which was broken by a deft reference on Wiggins' part to what he had found out to be Bertie's hobby—namely, mountaincering in the Alps.

he had found out to be Bertie's hobby—namely, mountaincering in the Alps.
Loriain was easily prevailed on to hold forth on this subject, and Sybil, getting intensely interested, quite forgot to convey by her manner how she hated him.
After dinner, Wiggins put forth all his power as a strategist, and made it surprisingly easy for Loriain not only to see a great deal of Sybil in the course of the evening, but to provide safely for the further development of the nequaintance.

"I shall allow myself the pleasure, then,
Miss Eason, of sending you the book we Miss Eason, of sending you the book we have been talking about," Wiggins heard him say, as the Easons rose to go. He was looking very straight into the girl's face, and her "Thank you very much; good night," was given in a low, slightly constrained voice.

constrained voice.

During the next few weeks, the young man, really thoroughly in love, went ahead like a steam-engine helped by the puny pushes of a child, who imagines it is doing all the work—Wiggins, it need not be said, being the child.

Sybli was bewildered by the frequency with which she met the son of her father's opponent, but Mr. Lorrain always looked so very surprised to see her, that she could not for a moment suspect him of complicity.

All this time, though both knew well enough that a law-suit was pending between their parents, the question was never broached between them. Sybil had a reputation for plunging headlong into any subject rather than maintain a constrained silence upon it, but on this matter a new changes kept here silent; while Lorrain. silence upon it, but on this matter a new shyness kept her silent; while Lorrain, who was moving heaven and earth to persuade his father to resign his claim, and had so far signally failed, naturally avoided a topic likely to raise hostility.

At last the day was fixed for the trial to come on, and then Bertle marched into Wiggins office, looking the picture of desput.

Once more luck favored him; Sybil was sauntering round the square alone. Bertie joined her, and presently—she hardly knew how—she found herself sitting on a beach with him standing in frout of her.
He was quite simple, and direct.
"Sybil." he said, "your father and mine are fighting this case, and next week it will be decided; if for us, you will hate me; if for you, I lean't play the part of a fortune-hunter. Wiggins was not so jubilant as might have been expected. True, his great scheme had succeeded admirably, and his reputation for diplomacy was recognized all round: but, on the other hand, he had and so convinced of his ability to establish Dr. Eason's claim, that the compromise patched up at the last minute see enatch a second, even sweeter cup of triumph from his lips.

It was not till the wedding day arrived

It was not till the wedding-day arrived that his self-satisfaction pegained undvided supremacy. On that occasion his calm consciousness of sagacity, benevolence, and power over his fellow-benem made his manner grand. Everybody credited him with having been the manager of this affair, and for once in his life he had his fill, or almost his fill, of deference and respect. Privately Lorrain whispered to Sybil, with the basest ingratitude, "You know, all old Wiggins really had to do with it was the original introduction. After that was the original introduction. After that I didn't need any edging on; love would have found out the way anyhow.

"But I shall never forget that Mr. Wiggins thought of it and smoothed it," said Sybil warmly. "I'm going to be grateful to him all my life."

Are constantly exposed to danger from Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and diseases peculiar to the throat and lungs. For such allments, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, promptly administered, affords speedy relief and cure.

As a remedy for Whooping Cough, with which many of our children were afflicted, we used, during the past winter, with much satisfaction, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For this affection, we consider this preparation the most efficacious of all the medicines which have come to our knowledge.—Mary Parkhurst, Preceptress, Home for Little Wanderers, Doncaster, Md.

My children have been peculiarly sub-

My children have been peculiarly sub-ject to attacks of Croup, and I failed to tind any effective remedy until I com-menced administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This preparation relieves the ectoral. This preparation relieves the ficulty of breathing and invariably tres the complaint.—David G. Starks natham, Columbia Co., N. Y.

I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for many years, and have found it especially valuable in Whooping Cough. This medicine allays ull irritation, prevents inflamination from extending for the control of t ritation, prevents inflammation from nding to the lungs, and quickly sub-s any tendency to Lung Complaint.
